

Work flow : Projects

In future, it's possible that you'll encounter:

- quitting R, do something else, and return to your analysis the next day.
- working on multiple analyses simultaneously that all use R, and you want to keep them separate.
- the need to bring data from the outside world into R and send numerical results and figures from R back out into the world.

To handle these real-life situations, you need to make two decisions:

- What about your analysis is "real", i.e., what will you save as your lasting record of what happened?
- Where does your analysis "live"?